

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN

The undersigned took private lessons in Polish and Russian respectively at the Centrum Języka Polskiego (CJP) language school for almost three years, from 2007 to 2010. Over these three years, having two hours of Russian and two hours of Polish each week, I was taught by four different teachers, depending on language and schedule. I found them all most pedagogically competent and they all seemed to take a genuine interest in my actual language learning needs – mainly professional in Russian and private in Polish and they adapted the content of the lessons accordingly, both as regards topics and choice of written materials. I can sincerely say that the CJP and its teachers helped me to significantly improve my level of both Russian and Polish and that I have had a lot of use and pleasure of these improved language skills in my subsequent professional and private life.

While all teachers were very good, Ms Lena Młynarska stood out as a particularly inspiring and pleasant teacher, but I have no hesitation in recommending the CJP and all its teachers, without any reservations, to anybody interested in learning or improving their knowledge of Russian or Polish.
